History has given some few indistinct da a, and imagination has done the rest in this story of secret sin. The Intendant Bigot, whose profligacy and extravagance were unlimited, and whose rcpacity furnished his requirements, constructed this chateau in the wilds of the mountains, and hither, with companions as graceless as himself, he was wont to adjourn to indulge in every excess of dissipation. The Intendant was a man fond of field sports, and the chateau was the head-quarters of his hunting expeditions. It is said that on one of these he lost his way, and met a young Algonquin squaw of singular beauty, who led him to the chateau, and was induced to enter its walls, but its strong doors were closed against her egress, and she remained either a prisoner to love, or to fate. But the Intendant was a man of...
